Making a difference in the lives of their patients

“People come into the Emergency Department and they are anxious; they don’t know what to expect.” —Melissa Wallace, RN, BSN

Melissa Wallace, RN, BSN, an Emergency Department nurse at Beebe Medical Center, sees it every day, the anxiety in the eyes of patients as they fear what might be wrong.

“I can be the first person who sees them in the examination room,” she says. “I ask them to tell me what is bothering them. It’s like making a friend. I listen to what they say and observe their non-verbal behavior. I assess their respiratory rate and compare my findings to what is on the monitors. I meticulously document.”

The doctor arrives to examine the patient. Sometimes lab tests, ultrasounds, or CT scans are ordered, and these tests have to be done quickly. Time is of the essence in the Emergency Department as doctors and nurses have to assess a patient’s condition to determine whether it is life-threatening. The patient may need an emergent cardiac procedure. The tightness in the chest may signal pneumonia, or a heart attack, or simply indigestion.

“Beebe School of Nursing gave me a strong foundation with its ‘head-to-toe assessments’ that we were required to do,” Mrs. Wallace, who graduated in 2007, recalls. “It made us look at the whole person.”

Cover: Melissa Wallace, RN, BSN, is a nurse in Beebe Medical Center’s Emergency Department.

Mrs. Wallace also credits the mentoring she received in the Emergency Department after she graduated and after she passed her licensure boards.

Charge Nurse Tracie Roberts, RN, MSN, a Beebe School of Nursing graduate who has worked in the Emergency Department for more than a decade, agrees that an experienced nurse has learned to look at a patient and know what he or she needs.

“We have to rule out what is acute (life-threatening), and that is why tests are often ordered, and that is why we sometimes find something else wrong that we are not looking for.”

Listening to the patient is important, but so is knowing what questions to ask to get to the truth.

“Each person is unique and seldom presents exactly like what is described in the textbook,” she explains. “I always try to get the information from the patient, rather than from a family member. There are clues in what the patient says as well as in how the patient looks.”

The Emergency Department nurse focuses on the patient, but he or she also helps the family members understand what is wrong.

“We often have to explain what the medical language means to the patient and to the family. We always try to comfort them.” —Tracie Roberts, RN, MSN

When an extra hand is needed, the nursing supervisor often has to be called.

“I was recently called to help take care of a five-year-old child,” Beebe Nursing Supervisor Jeannie Wallo, RN, recalls. “Her mother and siblings were hurt in a car accident and being treated. She could not be with them.”

Though Ms. Wallo’s duties include overseeing patient-care-related staffing throughout the hospital and overseeing the assignment of patients to beds, she is never far from one-on-one patient care.

That day she kept the little girl calm as she followed the condition of the other family members. She also telephoned the father to let him know that the family was in the hospital and that she had his daughter safely with her.

“One of my responsibilities is to contact family members when there has been a trauma. I always tell them, ‘This is Jeannie, the Nursing Supervisor at Beebe.’ I am honest, but I focus on helping them to remain calm.”

That day, the father arrived and the family went home with him. It was a happy ending. Unfortunately, that is not always the case, and Ms. Wallo finds that she becomes the family’s liaison when the medical team is busy treating the patient.

“It is important for them to have a face and name when they arrive. I try to comfort them.” —Jeannie Wallo, RN

Taryn Harris, RN, a nurse in the Intensive Care Unit, finds that she also comforts family members even as she focuses primarily on her patient. In the ICU, it is not unusual to have one nurse to one patient, though one nurse to two patients is more common.

“My patients can be in a coma or in a deep, induced sleep to keep them still when they are on a ventilator, but I always talk to them and I tell the families to do the same thing. I tell the patient who I am and why I am in the room and what I am doing. Many times, I have had a patient tell me months later that they remembered my voice.”

Ms. Harris has been a nurse for 13 years, the last five of which have been in ICU. Her patients are very sick. They have suffered serious health issues such as blood clots, infections and renal failure. Often they are dying.

“I am the patient advocate, the spokesperson to the doctor. I monitor the vital signs and let the doctor know of immediate and ongoing conditions.” —Taryn Harris, RN

“At Beebe we do not have interns and residents. The doctors expect the nurses to know the condition of the patients.”

Ms. Harris emphasizes the team spirit and collaboration that is always evident within the units at the hospital—in the Emergency Department, the Operating Room, or any one of the specialized floors.

“The staff in the unit is my family.”

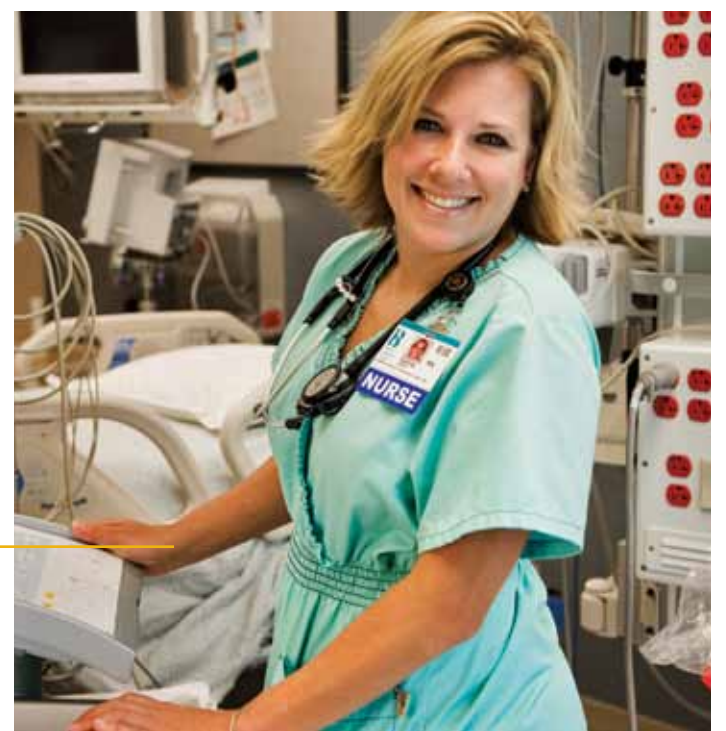

Carol O’Driscoll, RN, BSN, BS, was a nurse in an operating room for 24 years before she became the Director of Surgical Services at Beebe Medical Center. “People come to a hospital for nursing care; the doctors write the orders but the nurses carry them out,” she says.

Today, Ms. O’Driscoll oversees the team of 156 Beebe healthcare professionals in the operating room, in addition to the 48 surgeons and 17 anesthesia providers. There are 6,000 surgical procedures performed at Beebe Medical Center yearly.

Her past experiences as a surgical tech, a licensed professional nurse, and an operating room nurse have given her an in-depth understanding of what goes on in the operating room and what efforts are needed to make it run smoothly.

“I still put on my scrubs and go into the operating room to see what is going on,” she says. “I’m still available if I am called.”

While Ms. O’Driscoll says she is most proud of the fact that she is a nurse, she also is proud that she is a nurse who has moved into a leadership position.

“Who better to make strategic decisions involving patient care than a nurse? Nurses have moved into leadership positions over the past decade. Finally we are recognizing nurses at all levels.”

—Carol O’Driscoll RN, BSN, BS

At Beebe Medical Center, Ms. O’Driscoll has spearheaded the implementation of life-saving quality and safety initiatives in the operating rooms. One of the initiatives is called the “Time Out,” which requires the entire operating team participating in a surgical procedure to stop and verify the correct person, procedure, and site before the surgery begins. The second is a World Health Organization initiative to create and follow checklists in the operating room.

“The nurse in the operating room calls the ‘Time Out’ and is critical in these initiatives,” she says. “The nurse speaks up for the patient and promotes safety checks to catch errors before they happen.”

Another nurse, who the patient may not see, is the one who today plays a crucial role as hospitals implement electronic medical records. This computerized system—already evident at the bedside at Beebe Medical Center, means that the patient’s nurse inputs medical information about the patient into the portable computer rolled into the patient’s room. This information is then available to the doctors even when they are not at the hospital. Today, at Beebe, hospitalized patients have wristbands with information about them that is scanned by the nurse, sending it into the computer. The nurse also scans the label on the medication to be given to the patient, making sure that everything is accurate.

Beebe School of Nursing graduate Marsha Rogers, RN, is both a nurse and a computer expert. She has melded these two professions together, and now, as a “nurse informaticist,” builds the computer programs that allow this bedside scanning to take place.

“While I am no longer at the bedside, I believe that I truly am making a difference in improving the safety of how patients receive their medications in the hospital.”

—Marsha Rogers, RN

Capital campaign for expansion of Beebe School of Nursing

Beebe Medical Foundation is kicking off a capital campaign to raise $3 million to expand the Beebe School of Nursing. The total project is anticipated to cost $5.1 million.

The Foundation already has received $1.8 million in state and federal funds and $800,000 in donations, including $97,330 from the recent Beebe Art Auction. The Beebe Medical Center Auxiliary also donated $300,000 this year to the project—the largest annual donation the Auxiliary has ever made.

Local community leaders Alex Pires, Jr. and Jim Richmann, both Beebe Medical Foundation Board members, are co-chairing the campaign.

“My wife Frances and I support the expansion because of three benefits,” Mr. Richmann explains. “Nurses provide the most cost-effective, personalized healthcare available; a larger school creates professional career opportunities in our community; and a more technologically advanced institution of higher learning translates into positive economic development.”

Mr. Pires says the project is important for the community.

“Beebe School of Nursing is an excellent school and has helped provide our community with the nurses we need. Yet, it is modest in size and has to turn students away.” He warns of the looming national nursing shortage that could impact coastal Delaware.

“Nurses are the backbone of the hospital,” he says. “They are in the front line and they are the leadership. We must build this facility and open the doors to more students.”

Beebe School of Nursing was established in 1921 and is the only hospital-based nursing school in the state. It offers students the unique opportunity to regularly experience the hospital environment as they carry out their studies. Its graduates have higher average pass rates on the nursing licensure exam than is usually seen at the state and national levels. Beebe graduates' pass rates in 2009, for example, were 93.8% compared with the Delaware rate of 84.9% and the national rate of 88.4%.

Today the school is housed in an antiquated building with space for only 30 students. The planned expansion will allow the number of students to double and modern technology to be introduced. The two-story dormitory will be razed to make room for a three-story building to house classrooms, clinical laboratories, a library, a computer laboratory, and conference rooms.

“We also are re-defining our strategic direction as we look into the future needs of our community,” says Connie E. Bushey, MEd, BSN, RN, Director, Beebe School of Nursing. “We want to make sure that our graduates are prepared to offer the highest quality care to the patients.” ■

EDUCATION AND EARLY DIAGNOSIS

While treating cancer patients is of paramount importance at Beebe Medical Center, the emphasis on prevention and early diagnosis stands out.

“We know that the patient’s prognosis is better if the cancer is diagnosed in the early stages,” says Kathy Cook, MSN, RN, Cancer Screening Nurse Navigator at Tunnell Cancer Center. Her role is to encourage people to be screened for breast, cervical, prostate, and colon cancers, reminding them that these cancers are among the most common, and that they can be diagnosed in early stages—unlike many others.

Ms. Cook, who has been a nurse for more than eight years, goes into the community, speaking to people at churches, neighborhood centers, and schools. She recently organized a Men’s Health Forum, in part to educate men on the new guidelines about prostate cancer and when and why a man should be screened.

She helps those who can’t afford to be screened to find financial aid and acts as a liaison with Tunnell Cancer Center for those who may

Two Medical Oncologists Joined Tunnell Cancer Center This Year

Medical oncologists/hematologists Muhammad Arif, M.D., and Nouman Asif, M.D., have joined the multi-disciplinary medical team at Tunnell Cancer Center that includes two other medical oncologists/hematologists, two radiation oncologists, and a staff of specialized oncology nurses, an oncology pharmacist, a registered dietitian specializing in cancer care, and other professionals who directly impact patient care.

Dr. Arif is Board Certified in Medical Oncology, Hematology, and Internal Medicine. He has more than 10 years of experience and has developed an interest in treating patients with multiple myeloma, lymphoma, and colon cancers. Dr. Arif completed a Fellowship in Hematology and Oncology at the Western Campus of Tufts University at Baystate Medical Center in Springfield, Massachusetts, and a residency in Internal Medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University at Harlem Hospital Center in New York.

Dr. Asif completed a Fellowship in Hematology/Oncology at Washington Hospital Center/Georgetown program and a residency at UPMC Presbyterian/Shadyside Hospital in Pittsburgh. Before coming to the United States in 2005, he practiced internal medicine in Pakistan and Saudi Arabia.

Tunnell Cancer Center was established in 1995. It has received the Commission on Cancer's highest accreditation with commendation as a comprehensive community cancer center, and the 2008 Commission on Cancer Outstanding Achievement Award for excellence. Tunnell Cancer Center's clinical specialties are medical oncology/hematology and radiation oncology. About 200 patients visit the center each day.

need further resources, or for those who have become a patient.

The Cancer Screening Nurse Navigator role has existed several years, thanks to the State of Delaware Cancer Treatment Program. This year a new Sussex County-wide, cancer prevention, education and early diagnosis program has allowed the role to expand.

The Philadelphia Affiliate of Susan G. Komen for the Cure funded the new program, Sharing our Stories, Saving our Sisters (SOS²) with a $99,986 grant to Tunnell Cancer Center.

Sharing Our Stories, Saving Our Sisters (SOS²), focuses on providing free breast cancer screening and education to women in minority and underserved populations in Sussex County who might otherwise not receive the healthcare that they need. The incidence of breast cancer for all women increases with age and is highest among white women; however, mortality rates are highest among African-American and Latina women.

Judith Ramirez, Ed.D., Manager of Psychosocial Services and Outreach at Tunnell Cancer Center, who is spearheading SOS², has enlisted a team of cancer survivors to spread the message. These women, called "lay navigators," are trained in how to educate other women and in the resources that are available. SOS² Event Coordinator Ann Athas arranges the venues for the lay navigators to attend.

"It has become my passion," says lay navigator Joyce Rickards. "With early breast cancer detection, you get a second chance to live life to the fullest."

"With early breast cancer detection, you get a second chance to live life to the fullest."

JOYCE RICKARDS, lay navigator

Ms. Rickards knows the fears and hope that one goes through after being diagnosed with cancer.

In 2006, she was diagnosed and treated for gastric cancer. In 2008, she was diagnosed and treated for breast cancer.

“God has brought me through cancer twice, and this is why I need to help others. Spiritually, it is the path I need to be on.”

Ms. Rickards says she also became a lay navigator in memory of her mother, who died of breast cancer. Her mother was diagnosed and treated, and then lived for 25 years until the cancer returned. Women listen to her because of what she has gone through, Ms. Rickards says.

“Some tell me that they don’t want to know that they have cancer. I tell them that they have to know.”

Dr. Ramirez says that the lay navigators do an excellent job of spreading the message to women who would not otherwise know about breast cancer or that mammograms can be free if the woman is financially eligible. The program kicked off in the spring, and Dr. Ramirez is building partnerships with organizations throughout Sussex County to make sure that the message continues to be spread.

“We want to reach as many women as we can,” she explains. “And only through a collaborative effort, where people are working together, can we do that.”

Beebe Medical Center’s focus on cancer education does not stop with prevention. To make sure that patients understand their cancer and their treatments, new patients are enrolled into a class called “What color is your ribbon,” where they receive an overview of what to expect in regards to cancer treatment.

“Our goal is for our patients to have healthy bodies, minds, and spirits,” says Dr. Ramirez. “We want our patients to be informed and to understand and to take part in their own treatments.” ■

Dedicated Oncology Unit Supports Beebe Medical Center’s Multidisciplinary Oncology Program

Beebe Medical Center has opened a dedicated, inpatient oncology unit on the fifth floor of the hospital facility on Savannah Road in Lewes.

The newly renovated unit has seven private rooms and offers individualized care for hospitalized cancer patients and for other patients who have had cancer surgery. The unit is staffed by specially trained and certified chemotherapy nurses.

The specialized unit supports Beebe Medical Center’s multidisciplinary oncology program, which includes the Tunnell Cancer Center outpatient facility on John J. Williams Highway in Rehoboth Beach and an active cancer surgery program at the hospital.

WHAT IT MEANS TO GIVE BACK

Joanne Greenspun can be found giving tours in the Lewes Historical Society Complex on most Friday mornings in the summertime. At 82 years of age, she is knowledgeable about local history and can tell you just about anything there is to tell regarding those buildings and what is inside them.

Though she has lived most of her life outside of Delaware, she was born here, and her mother's people, the Marshall family, have local roots dating back to the 1700s. Beebe Medical Center co-founder Dr. James Beebe even delivered her in the early Beebe Hospital.

“I don't have any children so I'm not interested in leaving an estate when I die,” she says. “So instead, I've set up charitable gift annuities for organizations I believe in. Beebe is one of those.”

Ms. Greenspun is one of many donors who have discovered creative philanthropic “planned giving” vehicles as a way to support their favorite organizations. There are all kinds of these vehicles, such as trusts, different types of annuities, and distributions from a will. Many offer the donor tax advantages and interest payments while they are still living, as well as the knowledge that the donor will make a difference in the lives of others for years to come.

Ms. Greenspun has regularly returned to Lewes from where she has lived in Philadelphia and New Jersey. After she retired in 1992 as Director at the Vineland Public Library in New Jersey, she started volunteering at the Lewes Historical Society complex as a docent. She's followed the growth of Lewes and of Beebe Medical Center. She says that charitable gift annuities are the best investment she can think of.

Joanne Greenspun, who was a Beebe baby in 1928, lives in Medford, New Jersey, and volunteers as a docent at Lewes Historical Society.

PLANNED GIVING

“They are the best investment around because they pay very good interest rates. You don’t want to put your money in the stock market.”

In a charitable gift annuity, the donor turns over a certain portion of money to the organization he or she supports. The donor then gets an income from that gift. There also are tax advantages.

Beebe Medical Center urologist Ramachandra U. Hosmane, M.D., created a charitable remainder trust to which he contributes each year.

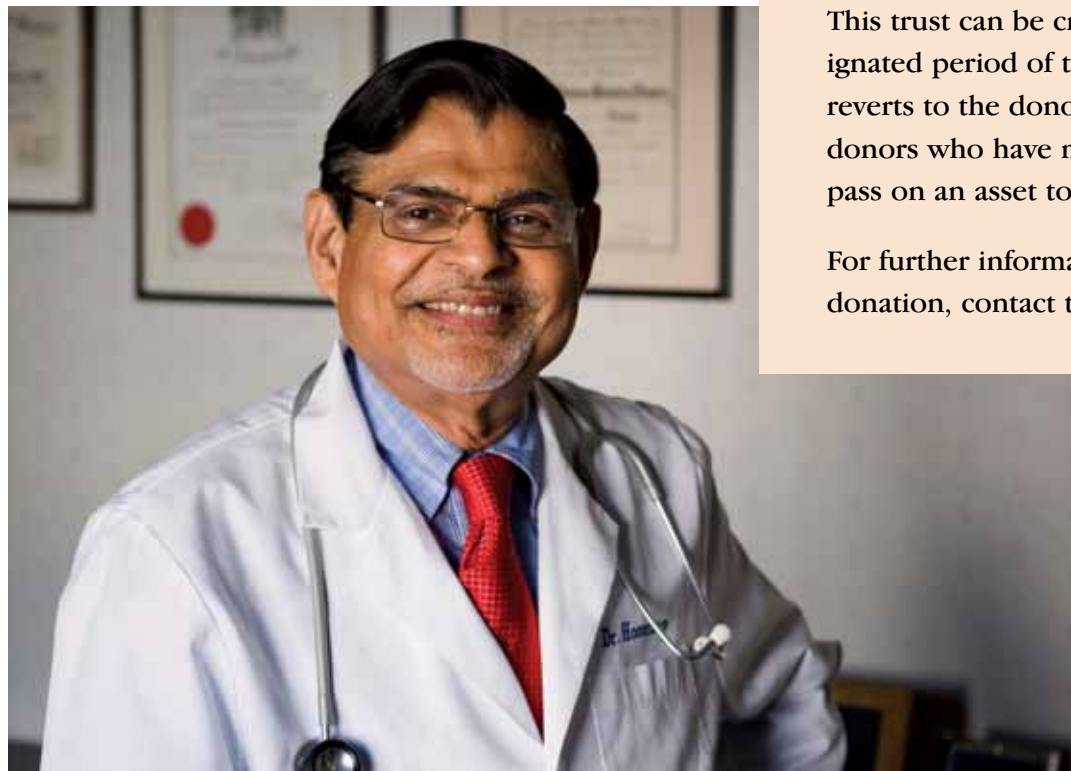

“I started working at the hospital in 1978,” he says. “The community has grown and the hospital has grown as I have grown in my career. I want to give back. And I want the hospital to continue to grow.”

Dr. Hosmane recalls how small the community was when he arrived.

After finishing his residency in urology at Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital in Philadelphia, he wanted to go somewhere that needed a urologist.

“They needed one here. There were none.”

Paul Mylander moved to Lewes in 1990 to take over as president and CEO of Delaware National Bank. He had worked in the banking industry in Washington D.C. for more than 20 years. As he and his wife Pat became involved in the local community, in 2002 he was invited to join the Beebe Medical Foundation Board of Directors. Mr. Mylander became Chairman of the Foundation’s Vision 2005

Donations made through “planned giving” come in several financial vehicles. Most bring some tax advantage and they often generate income to the donor. Professional advisors should always be consulted. Examples include:

CHARITABLE REMAINDER ANNUITY TRUST OR CHARITABLE REMAINDER UNITRUST

Both of these are irrevocable trusts that feature income based on the value of the property donated. The annuity trust pays a fixed income based on the value of assets at the time the trust is created, while the unitrust provides a fluctuating income based on a fixed percentage of the trust’s annual value.

GIFT ANNUITY AGREEMENT

A person can make a gift to a charity and receive fixed, annual payments for life.

GIFTS BY WILL

It is possible through a well-planned will to make charitable gifts of a specific amount, particular property, a percentage of the estate, or all or a portion of the residue after providing for heirs.

LIFE ESTATE AGREEMENT

The title to a residence or farm is transferred to a charity while the donor retains the right to live there and enjoy the property for life. The donor receives tax deductions and the charity receives the property following the donor’s death.

CHARITABLE LEAD TRUST

This trust can be created to provide income for charitable purposes for a designated period of time. The remainder in the trust at the end of the period reverts to the donor or the donor’s beneficiary. This is a valuable tool for donors who have more income than they currently need and who wish to pass on an asset to a child or grandchild at a lower cost to the donor’s estate.

For further information on the Beebe Medical Foundation or to make a donation, contact the Foundation at 302-644-2900.

Ramachandra U. Hosmane, M.D., Lewes urologist, created a charitable remainder trust that he contributes to each year.

Capital Campaign, which raised more than $12.5 million, enabling Beebe Medical Center to embark on projects that built the Beebe Health Campus and expanded the hospital in Lewes.

Mr. Mylander not only continues to serve as Chairman of the Foundation Board but also joined the Beebe Medical Center Board in 2003 and has served as Treasurer and Chairman of the Finance Committee.

“When I got here 20 years ago, Beebe didn’t have the best reputation. But I’ve watched it getting better and better. I’ve seen the services improve and I’ve seen more and more doctors coming here. I wanted to be part of that. There are so many good things that the hospital does for this community.”

Mr. Mylander, who is Senior Advisor and Director of The Bank of Delmarva, earmarked a distribution in his will to Beebe.

“The lawyer who did it for me did not even charge because he felt it was such a good thing to do.”

Mr. Mylander is a strong advocate for choosing planned giving options to support Beebe Medical Center. He cited the importance of the outpatient facilities throughout the county, as well as the hospital itself that is located in Lewes.

“We want to make sure that we fulfill the health-care needs of this community.” ■

A GIFT TO BEEBE

HOW ENDOWMENT WORKS

An endowed gift is a donation that is maintained indefinitely by Beebe Medical Foundation. The principal amount will always remain intact because only a portion of the fund is used each year by Beebe Medical Center for the purposes specified by the donor. The other portion remains untouched to help the endowment grow and keep pace with inflation.

“Think about the satisfaction you feel when you make a gift to support the care available at Beebe,” emphasizes Gene Bookhammer, Chairman Emeritus of the Beebe Medical Foundation Board of Directors. “By establishing an endowment, you can provide support to Beebe forever.”

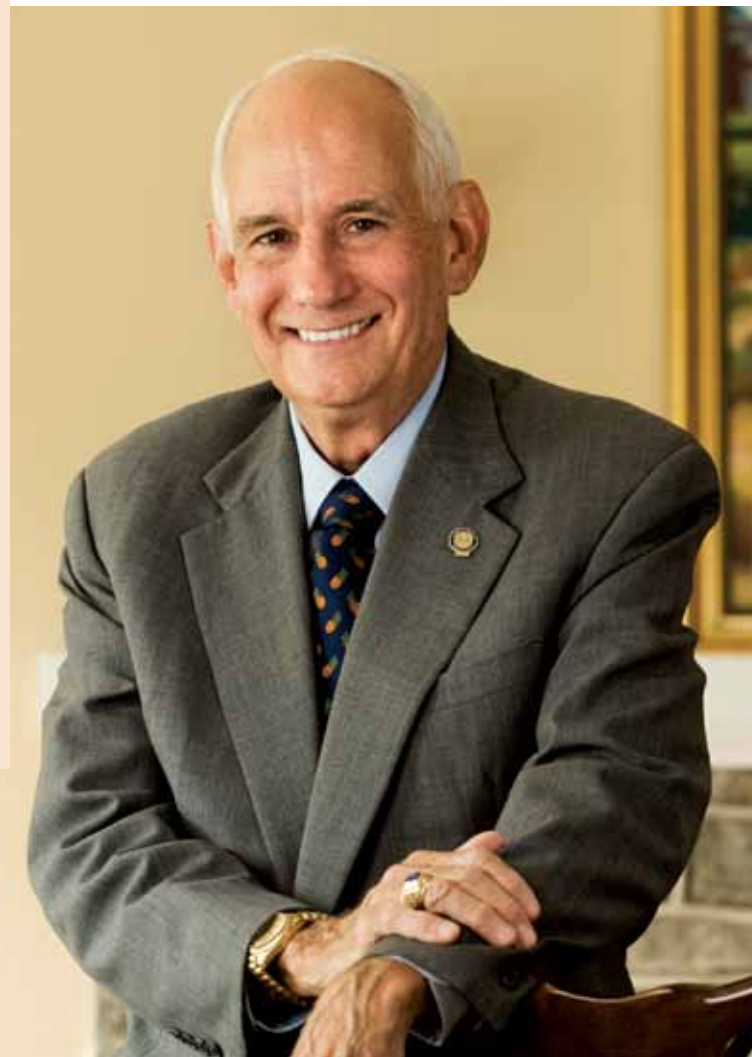

The Honorable Eugene Bookhammer set up an Endowment honoring his wife Kitty following her death in December 2005.

GIVE A FOREVER GIFT

A donor can establish an endowment with a single donation during his or her lifetime by the following: making gifts over a period of five years; through a bequest; or with a charitable trust. Each donor may restrict the use of the funds to a purpose that reflects his or her values. In addition, donors have the privilege of naming the endowment to honor a family member or a friend, or to put the endowment in their own name. The minimum amount needed to create a named fund is $25,000, and gifts of lesser amounts can be added to the general endowment.

“Looking to the future, I can see how a large endowment will be instrumental in our ability to meet the demand for sophisticated equipment and new facilities,” says Jeffrey M. Fried, President and CEO of Beebe Medical Center. “While we continue to need to fund current capital expansions, raising the level of our endowment is also critical to Beebe’s ability to care for our patients in the future.”

Paul Mylander is the Chairman of Beebe Medical Foundation.

Beebe Honor Roll of Donors (7/1/2009–6/30/2010)

Beebe Medical Foundation was established in 1989 with the sole mission to raise philanthropic support for Beebe Medical Center.

Through the efforts of the Foundation more than $30 million has been raised to support new construction and renovation of medical facilities, new and ongoing medical programs, and to establish an endowment fund to ensure Beebe will always be available for this community.

As an independent not-for-profit organization Beebe Medical Center relies on the generosity of the many individuals, businesses, and foundations that are listed in this Honor Roll of Donors.

Paul H. Mylander, Chairman, Beebe Medical Foundation

Janet B. McCarty, Chairperson, Beebe Medical Center

Beebe Medical Foundation is located in the former home of Dr. Richard Beebe, who co-founded Beebe Medical Center in 1916 with his brother Dr. James Beebe. The house originally stood down the street on the site of what is today the clinical building of the hospital.

NURSING EDUCATION CAMPAIGN

The proceeds from the Nursing Education Campaign will enable Beebe Medical Center to expand the Beebe School of Nursing.

Nurses provide frontline care and comfort at difficult times in patients' lives. But there is a critical shortage of nurses in Delaware and across the country. The new Nursing Education Campaign will make it possible to double the capacity of the current nursing class, enabling us to graduate more nurses.

ANNUAL HOLIDAY OF LIGHTS TREE LIGHTING

December 9, 2009

Marking the beginning of the holiday season, this annual event is an opportunity to remember or honor family members and friends. Lights are placed on a tree on the lawn of the medical center as a sign of this remembrance at the beginning of the holiday season. The 2009 Holiday of Lights proceeds benefit Beebe Medical Center's Community Health Program that ensures:

- Our mission to make sure everyone has access to basic diagnostic medical care.
- Community Health conducts multiple screening programs and health fairs each year and structures these programs so that anyone can take advantage of these important medical tests, regardless of ability to pay.
- Beebe Medical Center is committed to providing the best possible care at the lowest possible cost.

JEAN & JOAN FUND GOLF TOURNAMENT

October 6, 2009

The Jean & Joan Fund was established in the memory of Jean James and Joan Martin, two outstanding women who lost their valiant battle with cancer. During their final months, both women were surrounded by families that loved and cared for them and a circle of friends who generously gave their time and support.

It is most important that people going through these trying times receive all the physical and spiritual support available. The goal of the Jean & Joan Fund is to assist the Tunnell Cancer Center in providing care and comfort for patients. The fund has supported the establishment of the Jean & Joan Reflection Center at the Tunnell Cancer Center, purchased three vans for the transport of patients to and from their treatments, funded the building of the enclosure for the Tunnell Cancer Center Healing Garden, and supported the Tunnell Cancer Center Special Needs Fund.

The 2009 golf tournament raised $32,000, bringing the total Jean & Joan Fund contributions since its inception to $282,000.

PROGRESS FOR PROSTATE CHARITY GOLF TOURNAMENT JULY 16, 2009

Cripple Creek Golf and Country Club's Progress for Prostate Charity Golf Tournament was established by a group of individuals who wanted to focus attention on prostate cancer. Prostate cancer is the most common type of cancer found in American men, other than skin cancer. Early detection is the key to combating this disease.

Progress for Prostate Charity Golf Tournament has contributed over $110,000 to help Beebe Medical Center provide free prostate screenings and community awareness programs.
